

KAWANANAKOA MASKED BALL

Merry maskers will foregather at the Moana Hotel tonight to do honor to Miss Louise Bradley and Miss Beattie Bradley, guests of Prince and Princess Kawanakoa. The procession will form on the lanai, and, headed by the Master of Ceremonies, will proceed to the ballroom. At the foot of the staircase leading to the ballroom two boys in costume will be in waiting to receive the invitation cards of admission, which must be handed in as the procession passes along, and at the head of the stairs two other boys will hand to each guest small ribbon badges which the ladies and gentlemen are requested to pin on their shoulders.

Princess Kawanakoa wishes to impress upon all maskers that any one not wearing a badge on returning to the ballroom, will be barred from entrance, and the rule will be strictly adhered to. This is done as a safeguard for those who hold invitations. The masqueraders will be received by the Princess, Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani, and the judges. After the grand march the ball will be formally opened by the masqueraders forming into sets for the lancers. After this the waltz and the deceptions will alternate until midnight. Promptly at 12 o'clock a bell will ring as a signal for unmasking. The Master of Ceremonies will then usher the prize winners to receive the trophies which will be bestowed by Queen Liliuokalani.

Following the awarding of prizes the masqueraders will proceed to the supper-room. The last electric car through Fort street will leave the Moana Hotel at 2 o'clock. For this occasion no spectators will be permitted on the lanais or in the grounds. The judges of the prize winners, all of the gentler sex, are expected to come not en mask, but in evening dress and wearing powdered hair.
